BAGLEY PRAISES MEN OF THE STEERING COMMITTEE

Citizens of all ranks in life, high and low, and of all parties, today were denouncing with savage emphasis the efforts of what they all call the "kept" press to stir up dissension in the legislature. They are reacting with indignation and expressions of supreme contempt the sustained effort of the newspaper organs to make the people believe Governor Simon Bamberger is opposed to a public utilities commission and that the legislators resent the helpful co-operation of the five members of the steering committee of thirteen who are not members of the legislature.

Judge John E. Bagley, the mentor of the Ogden bar, today expressed the consensus of opinion in Ogden and Weber county. He said, in part: "The people know that a public utilities bill is of the utmost importance. They demand the passage of the bill as drafted by the subcommittee, including the industrial—every utility which the people must use. This measure touches the welfare of every person in the state."

Surprise Is Promised.
"The people probably have no idea, however, how far it will affect their vital interests. For example, a year ago, Mayor A. G. Fell and his colleagues in the Ogden city commission granted a franchise for the supplying of electricity and gas and fixing the rate for a term of fifty years. Such things have been done in other cities. Here is proof of it, and assurance at the same time that the people still have the power to regulate the rates."

"On December 5 last, in the case of the city of Woodburn, Ore., against the public service commission of Oregon (161st Pacific Reporter, page 391), on appeal, the supreme court decided that where a municipality, under its home rule charter, granted a franchise fixing rates and later the public utilities act was enacted, the public service commission had authority to change and regulate the rates."

"This is a decision of especial importance to every citizen of Ogden. It is an exactly parallel case. This Ogden gas and electric franchise was granted before the creation of the public utilities commission, but from the moment when the forthcoming public utilities bill becomes law, the commission will have the power to change and regulate the rates for gas and electric supply in Ogden, no matter what the terms of the franchise may be."

The Fundamental Law.
"The supreme court quoted many eminent authorities in support of this doctrine, which is sound law in every respect. It is legally impossible for a municipality, or even the legislature, to grant and delegate a sovereign power or right of the people."

"The supreme court quotes the well known law that when any private property is publicly used, it may be regulated by law to the extent of the public interest. When an owner devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he must submit to be regulated and controlled by the public for the common good."

Elective Commission.
"The public utilities bill, as drafted, is evidently a magnificent piece of legislation, but I would seriously question the wisdom of one provision. I think the three commissioners, who are to enforce the law, should be elected directly by the people at the next general election, the first commissioner being appointed to serve until last time. If a commission is appointed, it may humbly be constrained to believe that it owes a certain fealty to the appointing power, and it may tend toward doing what that power might desire. The people want a commission absolutely independent of all pressure, except only the will of the people, who demand nothing more than justice and square dealing."

Eulogy of "Intruders."
Judge Bagley spoke in terms of warmest praise of the five men of the steering committee who are not members of the legislature, "who served nobly and efficiently as patriotic citizens, when called upon, in the co-operative and difficult task of preparing the draft of the public utilities and other important measures."

"The sacrifice which these men made in time, money and effort, extending through several months, was one which the public is not likely to forget, and for which they richly deserve public commendation and gratitude."

"A great majority of the people feel thus about it, for they are wide awake. All honor to every man, in or out of the legislature, who is striving to facilitate the passage of beneficial laws. It is, indeed, a hopeful sign of progress when men having the ability and position of these five men are willing to make such sacrifices for the public welfare."

Bill Sorely Needed Now.
Judge Bagley said the public utilities bill is sorely needed today to overcome the unnatural fuel famine. "The railroads have been open for weeks now," he said, "but the fuel famine continues. No assurance is offered of the early delivery of a supply of coal. The situation is mysterious. The people don't understand it. Whether it be due to lack of equipment, or to criminal conspiracy, or to inefficiency, carelessness, indifference—whatever may be the cause—the public utility commission should have power to get at the bottom of it and establish immediate relief. The remedy is embodied in the original draft of that bill."

The five "volunteers" of the steering committee to which Judge Bagley referred are as follows:

Methodist Thomas, chairman of the state Democratic committee, who conducted the victorious campaign; Judge Samuel R. Thurman, former state chairman, recognized as one of the ablest lawyers in the state; Professor William Roylance, of the University of Utah, already in the state service, a noted economist, who now has been called to serve as a committee adviser in the house; William R. Wallace, one of the leading business men of the state; Charles C. Rich, former territorial governor, member of the state campaign committee, recognized leader in Weber county campaign, which resulted in Democratic victory—the first time in nearly twenty years.

Service Gratuitous.
The services of the five "intruders" were entirely gratuitous. They paid their own expenses to the last penny, including railroad and car fare and hotel bills, and their efforts covered a period of four months of solid work.

The other eight members of the steering committee were three senators and five representatives. The senate appointed Olson, Dern and Chee. Each of these men is a member of the senate judiciary committee, which will handle the public utilities bill. The house appointed five, two of whom are on the house judiciary committee, including Richard W. Young, Jr., great grandson of the late Brigham Young, who is chairman of the committee.

AUTO DRIVER HAS FEW BAD MOMENTS

W. E. Cartwright, driver of an automobile delivery truck for the Ogden steam laundry company, assimilated a terrific blow from the crank of his machine shortly before noon today, with no worse results than a badly bruised arm, a pale face and much temporary pain. He was cranking his machine, near the Hudson avenue and Twenty-fifth street intersection, when the engine "bucked," the crank slipped from his hand and struck him on the right arm near the elbow.

His sickly pallor, caused by a pain, brought help to him and he was taken into the Smalley jewelry store. There he was attended by Dr. E. P. Mills, who ascertained that no bones were broken.

SOCIETY MISS FLORA ECCLES BECOMES BRIDE OF ORSON J. DOUGLAS

Probably the most brilliant event in Ogden social circles during the week was the wedding and reception at the home of Mrs. David Eccles, 2589 Jefferson avenue last Tuesday evening, when Miss Flora Eccles became the bride of Orson J. Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Douglas, 2632 Madison avenue.

The Eccles home was made doubly attractive with a profusion of American Beauty roses and rosebuds entwined with lily and ferns and caught with amethyst and streamers of pink ribbon.

The reception room was effectively decorated in a color scheme of pink and green and in the parlors and dining room the same effect was perfectly carried out with lovely French baskets of rosebuds and fluffy bows of pink ribbon.

At the appointed hour, 7 o'clock, the bride party entered the parlor, while Miss Lillian Thatcher's orchestra softly played the Lohengrin wedding march. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, D. C. Eccles, and the ring ceremony was impressively spoken by Bishop James W. Ure of the Fifth ward.

The bride was a picture in an exquisite creation of white satin and lace with white silver choker and earrings and Brussels net veil caught with sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a lovely shower bouquet of gardenias and pink orchids. Mrs. Alonzo Romney, twin sister of the bride, as matron of honor, was gowned in pink tulle and crepe and carried pink rosebuds. COAL ARRIVING OVER RIO GRANDE FOR THE CITY

Ogden's unprecedented fuel famine continues. Mayor Abbot R. Heywood this afternoon announced he had received assurances from the D. & R. G. railroad that thirteen cars of coal arrived in Ogden today and that thirteen more cars would arrive tomorrow.

This supply will last only a day or two, probably not longer than a day, for two-thirds of the residents are out of coal and the schools and public buildings have only a small supply, not more than enough to last four or five days.

The court house supply today was exhausted and the county commissioners held a special meeting to consider ways and means of obtaining coal. The county officers and clerks today were wearing overcoats. There was a suspicion of frost on everything.
